CHINESE WRITING.

Be Sacred.

The Chinese hold every scrap or writing sacred, no matter what the characters express—the merest commercial message, advertisement, etc. Since Confucius used these characters to teach his wisdom they are holy.

In the average Chinese community all letters and waste papers are laid away in a clean receptacle to await the collector, who appears at regular intervals to transfer the waste papers to the sacred furnace. If the papers were burned by the Chinese in their own homes, the ashes of the sacred writings would mingle with the ashes of wood and other fuel, and the ashes of Chinese writing are as sacred as the writing itself.

The ashes from the sacred furnace are placed in sacks, the sacks are conveyed by wagons to the sea and there, weyed by wagons to the sea and there, in a Mon War bost, are carried out where the tide runs swift and consigned to the waves.
